THE ABOVE IS THE RED CROSS HOSPITAL SHIP THAT DR. B. F. BRADBURY IS ABOARD. AND A GROUP OF NURSES.

Norway Municipal Court.

WILLIAM F. JONES, Judge.
Joseph A. Crooker of Norway was before the court Sept. 5th for assaulting his wife. He was found guilty, placed on probation and was discharged.

Mrs. Maria M. Ryerson.

Mrs. Maria M. Ryerson passed away at 1:30 p. m., Sept. 5th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Bates, on Deering street, at the age of 72 years, 11 months and 11 days. Death was due to heart trouble, after a long and painful illness of about 5 months. She bore her suffering with great fortitude, and was a woman of good Christian character.

Ryerson was born in Brunswick, Sept. 24, 1842, and was the daughter of George and Lydia Maxwell. She was educated in the schools at Brunswick. Her home was at Paris Hill for about twenty-five years, at West Paris six years and she came to Norway a little over a year ago.

Mrs. Ryerson was a member of the Baptist church at Paris Hill.

She was married three times. Her first husband was O. R. Newton of Peru, her second, George W. Garland of Paris Hill and her last husband was Alvin Ryerson of Paris Hill. She is survived by three children, Elton S. Newton, who is a blacksmith at West Peru; Maurice A. Newton of South Paris and Mrs. Georgia M. Estes of Norway; five grand children, one great grandchild, two sisters and one brother.

The funeral was held at the home of Samuel Bates on Deering street, Monday, Sept. 7th, and was attended by Rev. H. L. Nichols. Interment was at West Paris. The flowers were many and very beautiful.

Elm Tree Cut Down.

This tree has adorned the yard of its owner for nearly a century and more than three generations have seen it in its state. W. S. Cordwell, opposite Norway Opera House, Main street, was its owner and reportedly it cost $25.00 to cut it down. Surely had the street committee drawn pay at the Union scale it would have cost a hundred.

Frederick Walker, who is putting in concrete sidewalks, was the big boss of the cutting, while W. S. Cordwell and John F. Sampson were much in interest and evidence.

This elm, over 3 feet in diameter, was decaying and unsafe; it showed eighty years of existence. No one remembers when it was set out.

Herbert Rich hauled it away for the wood in it.

The Norway High School will open Monday morning, Sept. 14th. The common schools will open Monday, Sept. 21st.

The Soldier's Parting Hymn.

A Canadian paper says that when the regiments bound for the war were leaving Belleville last week, the bands played the familiar strain of the old hymn, "Abide With Me."

"Abide with me, fast falls the evening" Keep safe my loved ones, be their strength and guide If never more my own dear land I see
"O Thou who changed not, abide with me."
One life I have to give, it is my all—
And God be with me if I live or fall "When other helpers fail and comforts flee" In stranger lands, "O Lord abide with me."
"Swift to its close ebbes out life's little day," Dear hearts forget not when far away;
Upon the battle-field, upon the sea, Whate'er my fate, "O Lord abide with me."

So breathed the sad strains of the parting hymn.

Farwells were said, and eyes with tears grew dim.

Oxford County Fair.

Sylvester Smythe, a city kid, Boards at our farm this year. A. I. am sure 't would make you grin. If you could only hear him brag about the city sights, But when he piles up 't is too thick, I do some bragging too. I ask him if his Hippodrome Or Zoo has ever shed a hair. A pair of well-matched Devon steers That draw two tons of stone. And when he says it can't be done, I cross my heart and swear Silly Jones' steers do just that stunt At Oxford County Fair.

I ask him if the museums He praises up sky-high, Show pumpkins big as wagon wheels, And every kind of pie. Or patchwork quilts all made by hand, We've shown these things for 72 years, At Oxford County Fair.

I suppose he has seen lots of things, But so have I, 't is just as good As any other show. He never praises anything Except the city sights. But you just watch 't he'll change his tune At Oxford County Fair.

The singing by Gertrude Poyard was a special feature at this session of the association. Rev. Asa M. Bradley of Woodford, was also present.

HOW CHILDREN GROW

Children grow by nourishment—not overloaded stomachs or rich foods but by the quality of the food they eat. The digestive powers cannot procure these qualities from ordinary foods which results in weakness, dullness and sickness.

If your children are under-size, underweight, catch cold easily, are languid, backward, pale or frail, give them Scott's Emulsion which is pure medicinal nourishment. It sharpens the appetite, builds healthy flesh, firm muscles and active brains. Scott's is growing-food for children. Refuse alcoholic substitutes.

Fryeburg.

George Haley Goes to Pribilof. The following taken from the Salt Lake City Tribune of Aug. 28, will be of interest to his friends in the East:

George Haley, 143 East Sixth South street, professor of zoology at the Salt Lake High school, who formerly taught mathematics and English at the Japanese naval school in Tokio, has been given a position as teacher by the United States government at Pribilof Island, Behring sea.

The appointment of Mr. Haley to this position is due in part to the fact that he talks Japanese fluently. He spent many years in the Japanese empire and was graded a lieutenant in the Japanese army during his stay there.

Speaking of his new position yesterday, Mr. Haley said:

"While I am going to Pribilof Island as a teacher, I do not know who my scholars will be. The island lies off the west coast of Canada and in a part of the territory which we received from Russia in the Alaska purchase. The waters abound with seal, and it is probable that I will take up my new duties among the families of the seal fishers."

Margaret Farrington Livingston. The death of Margaret Farrington Livingston, occurred in Boston, Aug. 30. Mrs. Livingston was born in Fryeburg, the only daughter of the late Col. E. C. Farrington of Augusta. She was educated in the public schools, the Academy, Mrs. Caswell's school in Portland and Smith College.

Mr. Livingston was the author of two books, "King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table," and "The Story of Fra Lippo Lippi." For many years the home of the Farrington family was in Augusta. Mrs. S. W. Fife went to Augusta to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Elizabeth Swett of Paris, France, formerly of Lovell, is the guest of Mrs. Frances Farrington at Elmbank Farm, where she will remain for some time, owing to the conditions existing abroad.

NORWAY, MAINE.

Recollection of Early Settlers Of Greenwood.

By Prof. A. E. Verrill of Yale University.

Errata.—In the previous part of this article (Sept. 4) several errors occurred, owing to the absence of the author, who did not see a proof. Aside from minor typographical errors, the following corrections should be made:

Paragraph 1, last line, for they, read many.
Par. 5, for dividing rods, read dividing rods.
Par. 6, line 20, for experiences, read prayers.
Par. 9, line 3, for Octavius, read Octavius.
Par. 11, line 1, after not, add: arguments about predestination; line 10, for begun, read began.
Par. 13, line 2, for hair-strung, read hair-hung.
Par. 17, line 6, omit she, before said.

Rev. William Yates and Rev. Edward Whittle were both very early ordained in Norway as Methodist preachers. They were often called "Father Yates" and "Father Whittle," and frequently had the title of "Reverend." At any rate they both preached very often, not only in Greenwood, but in Norway and other neighboring towns, in the early days, when no regular preachers were chosen. They had no regular payments, though a small "contribution" for them was often taken up, but it was a mere pittance, at best. They surely worked for the love of the cause. Both were highly esteemed in those days, in spite of their peculiarities.

Their children intermarried. Elder Whittle was more easily angered than Elder Yates, and more violent in his speech and conduct. He did not hesitate to "speak right" in his pulpit, or personally to anyone who disturbed him. On one occasion, when one of the "sinful big boys" annoyed him by some mischief in church, he spoke to him by name and said: "I wish the Lord would hold you by the hands on the right side over the depths of burning hell." Then, after a long and impressive pause, he added: "Yet I hope he would not drop you."

In the early Methodist church meetings and prayer meetings the sexes were usually seated on opposite sides of the room; even husbands and wives were thus separated, for sanctity sake, no doubt.

Excentric preaching was by no means confined to the Methodists. It was equally true of the itinerant preachers of other denominations, especially those known as Free Baptists. One of these used to intone his sermon in a very peculiar, sing-song way, impossible to represent in type. Some of his sayings, when repeated in his manner, were very funny. I have a few examples handed down in the family of a lady who heard him.

One day he preached from a text, including the sentence:—"The time of the singing of birds is come and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land." One of his expositions was as follows:—(At each pause he gave a rising inflection) "You all know the turtles;—the little mud turtles;—that come out of the mud and sing in the spring.

Another, which was intended as a confession of his wickedness, before conversion, ran as follows:—"When I was a little boy;—what a wicked boy was I;—I used to catch the little birds;—and pull out their tail-feathers;—and let them go to see them get tail-e-out, tail-e-out through the air.—Oh what a wicked little boy was I;—to catch those poor little birds, and pull out their little tail-feathers;—and let them go tail-e-out, tail-e-out through the air. Among the preachers of this denomination who preached sometimes in Greenwood I can mention only Rev. Mr. Hazleton; Elder Emery; and Elder Kennistown.

Two Old Verrill Farms. A little south of the Rev. William Yates farmhouse, on Patch Mountain, and opposite the old cemetery, there was a road, now a mere lane partly overgrown with trees, leading westward about a mile to the old Verrill farm, then occupied by my grandfather, Daniel Verrill, who settled there, or at least built the house there, before 1802. He had twelve children. Eight boys and one girl lived to grow up. The eldest, Peter, settled in Calais, Me. Benjamin and Cyrus settled in Minot. They all three had large families. Jacob B. never married, and remained on the old farm after the death of his parents there. Theodore B. settled in Bethel. I think his family is extinct. Daniel C. and Enoch C. eventually settled in Auburn, but both had families of children in Greenwood city. Harrison Verrill, son of Daniel C., lives now in Minot. My grandfather came to Greenwood from Minot, but his ancestors lived at Gloucester, Mass., about 1725. He died in 1859. His wife was Eunice Cordwell. She was a twin-sister of William Cordwell of Oxford. Like him, she was small in stature, but very active and energetic. She was born in 1780.

He was a good carpenter as well as a farmer. He had a good lot of tools. When visiting at his house, as a boy, I was delighted to use some of his tools, but the huge and very sharp broad-axes inspired me with awe. They were used in hewing large timber. He often made yokes for oxen; heavy wooden sleds for drawing lumber and firewood; cart-bodies and various other farmer's tools, both for himself and his neighbors. He also made the frames of houses and barns. As I knew him, he was a tall, thin, kindly old man, strictly temperate, and a member of the Methodist church. His deep well of excellent water had a huge home-made, wooden "wheel and axle" for hoisting the water, with a large stone counterpoise. This interested me very much, for it was an unusual arrangement. The old well, with its stone curb and lining, still remains, but many pretty ferns are growing out between the stones within the well.

My grandmother always had a fine flower garden near the house, surrounded by a broad stone fence. She always had a plenty of roses, peonies, sweet-williams, fragrant southern-wood, clove pinks, and many other good old-fashioned flowers, dear to the hearts of all the old ladies, nearly all of whom carried in church a small bunch of sweet-smelling "posies" every Sunday in summer. To this day, through the long period of more than 65 years, the mingled scent of southern-wood and sweet-williams brings back to me instantly the scenes of those old "Moving Houses," the face and gray hairs of the preacher; and the faces of some of the old ladies and elders and deacons of the church. No doubt many others are affected the same way. On the old stone wall, around the garden, there were growing patches of the large, spiny fronds of the large flowered eastern "prickly-pear," or Cactus, (Opuntia vulgaris), which I saw nowhere else about the town, and also large mats of houseleeks.

The "prickly-pear" is not a native in this district, but grows commonly on the barren cliffs and stony islands about New Haven, Conn. It has large double yellow flowers, and its spines are small and very sharp, in dense clusters, very unpleasant for barefooted boys. Where my grandmother got her roots of it, I don't know.

Some large bunches of lilac bushes are still growing around the old foundation of the house, but the fine old cherry trees, and most of the apple trees are gone. To me the sight of these old deserted gardens, orchards, and wells of the abandoned farms; the open cellars of the last houses, that had once been the scenes of happy home life, are sad and depressing. Still, from many of these homes, sometimes the humblest, have gone out diverging streams of life that have become of value to the larger life of distant cities and states. The strenuous life of the old farms have had much to do with their ultimate success.

In my boyhood, a cousin of mine, Daniel Verrill 3d, or "Little Daniel," as he was called, lived with his grandfather. He was a son of Cyrus Verrill of Minot, and was about four years my senior. He was a bright boy and a good singer. He became utterly infatuated with songs of the sea, such as ballads of naval battles; pirate ballads of Captain Kidd, etc., though he had never seen the sea, nor a boat larger than a canoe. He finally ran away and went to sea. Nothing was heard from him for many years. Finally his father received a letter from a missionary at Cape Good Hope, saying that his son was living at the mission house, at the point of death, and wished him to write home to his father. He had been wounded on shipboard by a large tackle-block falling from near the masthead and hitting him on the head. The letter had been several months on the way, for that was before the days of steamers. Later, another letter came from the same missionary saying that the man had recovered and had again gone to sea. I do not know whether he was ever again heard from, but I think not.

I well remember how, in the fall, he and other boys of the neighborhood used to make "dens" in the big hay-mows in the old barn, next the wall, so as to get some light and air through the open cracks and then hide, adjacent to these, "hoards" of the best apples growing on the farm. Then, on a rainy day, or any other time when we could get a chance, we used to go into one of these "dens," close up the long entrance gallery with hay, and then eat apples, while "Little Dan" would entertain us by the hour with his sea ballads of war and piracy.

Old Folks' Stories and Superstitions. I used also to enjoy the evenings when my grandfather, sitting before the blazing open fire in the "best room" of his family, used to tell us boys about the things that happened in the "olden times" of the first settlers. He used to tell of the frosty year, 1816, when frost and ice formed during every month, and all the corn and nearly all the other crops were killed. The winter months were not unusually cold, but March had its tempests; the latter part of April had its snow and ice; in May ice formed half an inch thick and the young crops and fruit buds and blossoms were killed; June was the coldest ever known here, for ice was formed; frosts were common, and snow fell from six to ten inches deep in some places. On the 7th of June there were two or three inches of snow, with severe cold and high winds, killing many adult birds as well as nestlings; with any foliage that had remained green previously; not only locally, but generally. July had both ice and frost. The 5th of July was so cold that ice formed an eighth of an inch thick. No corn escaped except rarely on the higher hills. Corn had been planted over and over again, and seed corn became exceedingly scarce and high priced, selling at $4.00 to $5.00; and rye and wheat at $2.00 to $3.00 per bushel. Most of the corn that grew was of no use, except for fodder. The frost was even worse; ice formed half an inch thick, and frosts were frequent. Although the first part of September was mild, the latter part was cold and frosty, with ice half an inch thick. October and November were also cold, but December was mild. Summertime for sleighing fell in November. The same or similar conditions prevailed also in England, etc.

There was nearly a famine the next year, all kinds of food being scant and high priced, and seed corn for planting hard to obtain. It was made worse because in 1815, there had also been late frosts and unusually cold weather in spring, partly killing the crops, and snow fell in some places to the depth of eighteen inches in May.

He also spoke of the great blizzard in March, 1819, when snow fell two feet deep, with high winds. It had melted but little up to the 10th of April.

He told us about the remarkable "dark day" of May 19, 1780, when the whole heavens became covered with a dense pall of lurid clouds, showing reddish, yellowish, and brown colors, and casting a greenish hue over all the landscape, and at noon it became so dark that birds and chickens went to roost, and cattle came home to the barns; bats and night birds flew about, and everything took on an awful gloom. Many people thought the end of the world was at hand, and some took to praying, even if they had never prayed before. No work could be done indoors without lighted candles. Thunder was heard, and it rained in some places.

Black, greasy, and smoky dust, like fine ashes, settled on everything out of doors, often forming a black film on ponds and streams, so that the cause was thought to be vast forest fires in some distant place. This darkness covered all of New England and the adjacent parts of New York and Canada. The pall of dark clouds lasted about fifteen hours, and disappeared gradually.

He also told us about the wonderful dark day, March 16th, 1806, when many people were frightened. They had to light candles to see to do their work. The house went to rest in the daytime, the stars became plainly visible; the temperature fell rapidly, and the dew fell upon the grass. The effect on the appearance of nature was wonderful and awe-inspiring. Though most intelligible people knew that it was caused by a total eclipse of the sun, which had long before been predicted, yet many ignorant people regarded it as a warning or "portent," and became frightened.

The disk of the moon was visible, and a dreadful day, which was accompanied by a terrible tempest, with lightning

HE SHOULD BE CONTINUED IN OFFICE.

CHAS. F. WHITMAN, Candidate for Clerk of Courts.

The writer having business in the courts of this State as a practicing attorney is personally interested in the election of certain men in this county next Monday, one of whom is Charles F. Whitman of Norway for Clerk of the Courts.

He has never conducted his office in a partisan manner as all know. Some of his warmest friends are not of his political faith. He takes pride in having court proceedings conducted with becoming formality according to the old time usages and running his office in the best possible manner. I have never heard any criticism in any quarter, but on the contrary only words of praise.

He has the full confidence of bench and bar. Men who do business in the courts require a clerk trained in the legal profession, and one in whom the judges and practicing attorneys have the utmost confidence.

Legal procedure in the past few years has been greatly changing—equity practice especially having largely increased. The issuing of legal papers and processes often involving large amounts, requires a thorough knowledge of legal procedure and of the law.

Judge Whitman fills the bill, and is fully equipped for the performance of the duties of this office. His records are all kept up to date—examined and approved at the end of every four years term.

The court officers, jurymen and parties having business in court, find him very kind, obliging and helpful. In this respect, doing lots of things not required by the duties of his position, but which are fully appreciated, he has no superior. One very frequently hears it said that he is the best Clerk of Courts in the State of Maine.

Before the Board of County Commissioners his services have been very valuable, and they do not want to dispense with them.

The annual printed county reports of the State, running back for many years, show that the Clerk's office in the County of Oxford, according to the cost of running it, stands well up to the head.

There has been no increase of the Clerk's salary since Mr. Whitman has had the office.

Is there any demand at this time for a change? Is there anything to be gained by it? Is it good business? If not he should be re-elected.

CITIZEN.

and terrific thunder that frightened everybody, while the wind was so fierce that it blew down whole forests of the largest trees, and some houses were struck by lightning. I do not remember the date of this, but think it was Sept. 23, 1815, when the great historical gale occurred, that devastated the whole coast of New England.

Another subject discussed was a spectacular display of "shooting stars," when all the heavens seemed to be full of falling stars. It was a meteoric shower of very unusual interest, which made many people think that the end of the world was coming at once, and caused them to pray lustily.

It has been called the most remarkable display ever recorded in America, and it extended over all the United States. It occurred Nov. 13, 1833.

The most ignorant and superstitious people at that time, as in Bible days, believed that comets, meteors, earthquakes, tempests, etc., were sent specially by God as punishments for their sins, or as warnings of worse things to follow.

Some others of the ideas then prevalent were very curious. I remember that when I was less than four years old I was very ill with scarlet fever, or "canker-rash" as it was called, when the throat was badly affected. As a last resort some old woman advised the use of bull frogs to "suck the poison" from my throat. Accordingly men and boys were sent in search of the frogs, which were found only after much difficulty, because it was not in the frog season. Two very large frogs were then held as close as possible to my mouth to "suck the poison." I remember to this day how their eyes bulged out and how frightened I was, for I had never seen a frog before. I suppose the frogs survived; certainly I did, but I shall never forget those frogs!

My grandmother always had quantities of dried medicinal herbs and roots tied up in bundles, labelled, and safely put away in a corner of the attic, and these were constantly called for by the neighbors, and cattle came home to the barns; bats and night birds flew about, and everything took on an awful gloom. Many people thought the end of the world was at hand, and some took to praying, even if they had never prayed before. No work could be done indoors without lighted candles. Thunder was heard, and it rained in some places.

Black, greasy, and smoky dust, like fine ashes, settled on everything out of doors, often forming a black film on ponds and streams, so that the cause was thought to be vast forest fires in some distant place. This darkness covered all of New England and the adjacent parts of New York and Canada. The pall of dark clouds lasted about fifteen hours, and disappeared gradually.

He also told us about the wonderful dark day, March 16th, 1806, when many people were frightened. They had to light candles to see to do their work. The house went to rest in the daytime, the stars became plainly visible; the temperature fell rapidly, and the dew fell upon the grass. The effect on the appearance of nature was wonderful and awe-inspiring. Though most intelligible people knew that it was caused by a total eclipse of the sun, which had long before been predicted, yet many ignorant people regarded it as a warning or "portent," and became frightened.

The disk of the moon was visible, and a dreadful day, which was accompanied by a terrible tempest, with lightning

Reasons Why the Present Register of Deeds Should be Re-elected.

J. HASTINGS BEAN OF PARIS

At the coming election, on the 14th of September, there is to be elected in the Oxford Registry District, which comprises all of the County except nine towns in the western section, a Register of Deeds. There are three parties in the field, and each has a candidate. So far as we know, the character and standing of each of the candidates is all right.

But we wish to say a word in favor of Mr. J. Hastings Bean, the candidate on the Republican ticket. Mr. Bean has for a number of years held this position. The people of the County with whom he deals have the utmost confidence in him; they feel that a certificate of title given by him is absolutely correct.

This is an important office where frequent changes are undesirable. While Mr. Bean is a Republican, he is not what might be termed an offensive partisan.

His friends among all the parties are numerous. The titles to the farms and all the lands of the people of the towns in this district are to a considerable extent dependent upon the accuracy and faithfulness of the Register. It is worth a great deal to people dealing in real estate to feel absolutely certain that the custodian of the records is one on whom they can absolutely rely. It is sincerely hoped by a great many of all parties that the present Register will be retained.

If you share with us in the desire to have him re-elected vote for him. This can be done by pasting one of his stickers—"J. Hastings Bean of Paris" over the name of the candidate for the same office on your party ticket.

Putting Tobacco in Tins is Like "Locking the Stable Door"

—"after the horse is gone." Because when tobacco is chopped into small pieces, much of the flavor evaporates before the tobacco goes into the tin.

There is only one way to keep all the natural fragrance and original flavor in tobacco until it reaches your pipe—and that is the hard-pressed Sickle plug. And the natural leaf wrapper is a better protector than any tin, tinfoil or waxed paper.

You always get a fragrant, slow-burning, cool smoke from Sickle, because you slice it off the plug as you use it. You get more tobacco, because there's no package to pay for. There's no tobacco wasted—and the fast pipeful is as fresh and sweet as the first. Smoke Sickle today—all good dealers sell it.

On the death of Brother Charles M. Coolidge, M. D., who passed to a higher life, Aug. 12th, 1914.
Whereas, Our hearts are again saddened by the sudden visit of the Messenger of Death, this time bearing away our beloved brother and doctor, Charles M. Coolidge, we fully realize that this event, we have met with a great loss, leaving in every home a cloud of sorrow, therefore be it resolved, That while we mourn for and cherish the memory of the Brother, who has been taken from our circle of unity, we can but realize that he has passed that dark portal through which we must all go ere we again join hands in fraternal greeting in the great Lodge above.
Therefore, let us all bow in humble submission to the will of Him, Who doeth all things well.
Resolved, That while we deeply sympathize with those who were bound to our departed Brother, by the nearest and dearest ties, we the better world where there are no partings and bliss ineffable bids a tear.
Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased Brother as a token of our love and respect; a copy sent to the Norway Advertiser for publication and one inscribed on the records of this Lodge and our Charter draped in mourning thirty days.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

On the death of Brother Charles M. Coolidge, M. D., who passed to a higher life, Aug. 12th, 1914.
Whereas, our hearts are again saddened by the sudden visit of the Messenger of Death, this time bearing away our beloved brother and doctor, Charles M. Coolidge, we fully realize that in this event, we have met with a great loss, leaving in every home a cloud of sorrow, therefore be it resolved, That while we mourn for and cherish the memory of the Brother, who has been taken from our circle of unity, we can feel that he has passed that dark portal through which we must all go ere we again join hands in fraternal greeting in the great Lodge above.
Therefore, let us all bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.
Resolved, That while we deeply sympathize with those who were bound to our departed Brother, by the nearest and dearest ties, we share with them the hope of a reunion in the better world, where there are no partings and bliss ineffable bids a tear.
Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased Brother as a token of our love and respect; a copy sent to the Norway Advertiser for publication and one inscribed on the records of this Lodge and our Charter draped in mourning thirty days.

ALICE PERKINS,
M. ELLA CHARLES,

Votes and Voters.

Citizen has Something New to Suggest in The Way Votes Should be Voted. Until the Law is Change Voters will Have to Vote as the Law Provides.

Another election day is at hand when the voters, especially those who are least informed will puzzle over the questions at issue and confused by claims and counter claims of political candidates will hesitate and wonder which way to vote.

There is one thing about the arrangements of the ballots which is confusing to many and well adapted to delay the final count of votes and at the same time affords an excellent opportunity to count as a straight ticket a ballot which may have several important changes written in faint pencil. We refer to the plan of marking the ballot.

The rule is, if you want to vote a straight ticket, make a cross in the square at the head of the ticket, and if you want to vote a split ticket, make a cross in the square at the head of the ticket. The same mark for a split ticket as for a straight ticket.

With the mark at the head of the ticket the committee who count the votes must carefully look each vote over from top to bottom, and then they may miss some change of one or two names written in faint pencil lines.

How much better it would be if the rule was, if you want to vote a split ticket, make a straight mark across the square at the head of the ticket. This at a glance would show whether the tickets which were split and which needed to be carefully looked over, and the others marked x could be quickly counted off.

It seems strange that some plain distinction between the two forms of ticket has not been adopted long before this. It would greatly facilitate the work of counting the votes. CITIZEN.

HON. HAROLD M. SEWALL, REPUBLICAN NO MINER FOR CONGRESS, 2D DISTRICT

His Record Is Most Interesting and Varied
AN INTERNATIONAL FIGURE Battled For Plain People at the Age of Twenty-Seven LED BIG FIGHTS IN MAINE

Bath Man Has Served With Honor In Both House and Senate and Has Stood For Things Which Are Now Recognized as Great Steps Forward —Anxious to Go to Congress to Fight For Merchant Marine

An international figure at the age of 27, at odds with the state department of the nation in the battle for the plain people, such was the dramatic beginning of Hon. Harold M. Sewall's political life story.

This man of 40, when the Republicans of the Second Maine district have selected as their congressional candidate, is no stranger to national affairs.

Younger men of today do not recall the Samoan incident which so stirred the first Cleveland administration.
Middle-aged voters of 40, unless they have been actively interested, think of it as a hazy dream, while men of a few more years know, when it is recalled, that it was one of the greatest crises of that generation. It was the time when the world expected the United States and Germany would go to war. The great central figure of that affair was Hon. Harold M. Sewall of Bath. He upheld the dignity of great statesmen such as Blaine and Frye.

But this man's record does not stop here. He has won his way in Maine.
In fight after fight he has made good.
He has stood for those things which are today recognized as great steps forward in this state. The abolition of the state printing system was due to his efforts, he set rolling the ball which ended the iniquitous free pass system by which Maine squandered a fortune annually, and it was he who sounded the death knell of the free system, by which many a man made fortunes at the expense of the state.
That is not all. He stood and fought against those measures which in his opinion were not for the good of mankind. Whether he introduced a measure, as a member of the legislature or not, if it was for the uplift of the downtrodden, Sewall could always be counted upon as voting for it.
Such is a brief summary of what he has been and what he has stood for.

Always a Political Student Activity in political matters is not new with him. Even in his boyhood he took to politics as readily as a fish swims. Before he reached high school, he was reading political history and after he got to that point in his educational career he devoured it in great volumes. The boys who were in school with him chuckle today when they relate yarns of how young Sewall used to stump some of his elders by his knowledge of politics, past and present.

His father, Hon. Arthur Sewall, was a Democrat—and he was one of the greatest shipbuilders and shipowners in Maine. It was natural that, from a boy, his son should show a tendency toward that faith. Early—before he entered Harvard, he was showing a tendency to revolt. Several things about the Democratic creed did not appeal to him. Chief of these was the tariff.
His record in the Maine legislature is one which many a man of marked reputation as a public speaker has failed to attain. By his logic and eloquence on at least two occasions, he turned a defeat into victory. Incidentally, it can be said, that in each of these cases he was championing the cause of the common men and women of the state.

But all this time he was studiously endeavoring to inform himself as to the affairs of state and nation. At the same time he was earnestly studying law, for it was his intent to become a lawyer.

He graduated from Harvard in 1882. Continuing his study of law in 1885, he was named by President Cleveland as vice consul at Liverpool.
The same year Harvard gave him the degree of LL. B.

Reaching Liverpool, Mr. Sewall went at his duties with the same serious intent to make good which had been his as a student. He came up and did it well. His reward for faithful service was to be sent as consul general to Samoa. This was a step upward and forward. As it turned out, it was the means of giving him a chance to assert that patriotic spirit which has always been characteristic of him, and, at the same time, show that when convinced he was right, he would not be bossed or shunted to one side.

Too a Firm Stand
It was well known that Germany desired to have and to hold the island.

HON. H. M. SEWALL OF BATH Republican Candidate For Congress in Second District

It was equally as well known that American interests there demanded a firm hand and the control by this government. At that time a conference was called for Washington to consider the country's situation and reach a settlement. Mr. Sewall, and he was then but 27 years of age, realized that the situation might arise which would test him. It came.
He met it with firmness and vigor which won the applause of Blaine and Frye and of two later Presidents of the United States, though the administration which sent him there to look out for its interests attempted to discredit him in the eyes of the American people.

All the information concerning the people of Samoa and the complex situation which he had, did not tend to make him look lightly upon his labors there on the day he passed in through the coral reefs which guard the harbor of Apia, and made his way to the consulate. As the days there passed he had good reason to think seriously. A revolution had sprung up against the king. It was instigated, so it has always been believed, by the German interests. The young consul general succeeded in prevailing upon the king to maintain peace; to do no fighting, assuring him that the powers in Washington would protect him.

But a day came when even his stout and optimistic heart was heavy.
The Germans landed marines from their warships, made the king a prisoner and took him away in irons, following which they took possession of, rather, recognized a different government of the island. This was a menace to American interests.

But Mr. Sewall met the situation as he always meets them. There were no cables. Instructions could only come by mail. He was left upon his own resources. He exercised his best judgment and refused to recognize the Germans' authority or that of any government other than the deposed king.

Possibly you think this did not require courage. If you do, just think what you would have done in a like circumstance.
Would you have had the courage to walk down the beach (that is the name of the street along the waterfront) passing through a line of German sentries, utterly disregarding their orders to halt?

That is what Sewall did.
He came out of the consulate and made his way through the town, passing through the lines, ignoring orders to halt and thereby declaring that the government of the United States, as represented by him, did not recognize German authority there.

Not a German officer dared order his arrest.
Returned to America
But he did not waste time. Mr.
Sewall knew that the situation was desperate; that America must take a firm stand and that the only way this could be done was to let the home government know the full story.
He took the first steamer and returned, with all haste, to Washington.

The state department of Cleveland's first administration was exceedingly weak in its foreign policy. Its attitude in this crisis so disgusted Mr.
Sewall that he resigned. The senate took the matter up and he was called before them to tell the story. For three days he testified before the senate committee which investigated the matter. In those three days he made no reference to note or prepared data.
He talked from his personal knowledge of events and conditions on the island. It was a most remarkable test of Sewall's ability, and stands, today, as one of most notable of congressional committee hearings.

His story of the situation, plainly but emphatically and clearly presented, won him the praise of senators and statesmen and of the press on the country.

In 1889, when the Harrison administration came into office and Secretary of State Blaine took hold of affairs with his sturdy grasp, and when Germany was made to restore the old king before this country would take up, in conference, the Samoa affair, Blaine sent for Mr. Sewall and named him to go with the commission which went to Berlin to arrange and adjust the trouble, to give them the benefit of his intimate knowledge of the situation.

When this commission was through with its labors, Harrison then sent the Bath man back to Samoa as consul general, to complete the splendid work which he had begun.

But Mr. Sewall's work in the Pacific was not ended with the conclusion of his consular duties at Samoa.
When McKinley wanted a man to go to Hawaii, one of three most important missions in his gift, he turned to Bath and invited Mr. Sewall to take the position. He went as the United States minister to that country. There he made a record for himself. There in 1898 he received the transfer of sovereignty of the islands to the United States and raised the first American flag there in token of this country's sovereignty over the land. Immediately he was appointed as the United States' special representative during the period while the territorial government was being organized and placed in operation.

He was the first member of the Republican national committee from the territory of Hawaii and brought the first delegation from there to a national convention. That was 1900.

Came Back to Maine
When the work of setting the new territory in running order had been completed, Mr. Sewall came back to Maine. He then took his belated examinations and was admitted to the practice of law in this state.

At this point it becomes necessary to go back and take up another line of Mr. Sewall's life. After the first experience at Samoa, he completely broke with the Democracy. As indicated elsewhere in this story, Mr.
Sewall had disapproved of the tariff policy of the party and when he witnessed the weakness of its international policy, completely disgusted, he quit and went with the Republicans.

His first important public appearance in Maine was at the Republican state convention of 1896, which elected Reed delegates to the national convention. He presided at that convention. His speech of acceptance attracted widespread attention for its clearness, force and literary merit.
It was noticed most flatteringly by all the leading papers of the country.

That same year he was elected a member of the Maine house of representatives and served throughout the session of 1897. He would have been returned to the house in 1899, but for his appointment as United States minister to Hawaii. On his return to Bath at the completion of his duties at Honolulu, he was elected, to represent the city once more in the Maine house of representatives of 1903. During this term he started the fight for improvements which he has consistently continued to the present time.

At that time some of the most important offices of the state, notably the secretary of state and the attorney general, were paid very small salaries, indeed, but were given the fees of office, which amount to fortunes every twelve months.

Mr. Sewall did not approve of this.
He felt that the entire system was wrong. His position was that officers should be paid a salary proportionate in size to the importance of the office and that the fees should go to the state. This, he felt and contended, was a practical reform. It would be a factor in tax reduction.
He introduced in the house a measure abolishing the fee system and putting all officers upon a salary basis. It started a storm. Old timers rallied at
it. It was called socialistic and wrong in theory as well as impracticable in practice. The same spirit which dismayed the Germans at Apia laughed at this opposition. Sewall fought in support of his proposition.
The bill was not enacted, but a resolution was passed providing for the appointment of a special committee to sit during the recess for the purpose of investigating the subject and report to the legislature of 1905.

Throughout the summer of 1904 this committee labored hard. It held extended hearings and when the legislature of 1905 convened, presented a report which for completeness and importance had not, at that time, been equalled. The result of this was the abolition, that session, of the fee system. Mr. Sewall was responsible for it. His fight, started in 1903, killed a very dangerous practice.

In the same session of 1903, when a resolution granting municipal suffrage to women was introduced in the legislature, he supported it heartily and did all in his power to bring about its enactment.
Likewise he endorsed and supported the proposition that United States senators should be elected by direct vote of the people.

The initiative and referendum was then a new idea in this state. Very few had any ready conception of it.
Mr. Sewall understood and approved it.
He supported the measure, as he did when it was before the legislature in subsequent legislatures and when it was finally submitted to the people of the state by the legislature of 1907.

Went After the Free Passes Again in 1904 did the people of Bath declare their faith in Mr. Sewall by returning him, for the third term, to the house of representatives.

That winter, as indicated in the preceding paragraphs, he helped to complete the annihilation of the free system, but with all his arduous duties on the special salary and fees committee of that legislature—and there was a lot of hard work done as one who reported the proceedings of that committee can testify—he found time to take up another very bad system in the state and start revolving the wheel which eventually ended in another important reform.

In those days if you stood a state official on his head, that portion of his anatomy would instantly be buried by the pile of transportation passes which would sift from his pockets.
They went loaded with them.

All members of the legislature fared very well with passes. Each had a pass for each road over which he was obliged to travel, going to and from the state house.
Up to that time, the prevailing practice had been to travel on the pass—this applied to legislators as well as other state officers—and charge and collect mileage from the state.

Mr. Sewall had generally had a pass on the Maine Central, which was the only railroad over which he traveled to reach the state capital. Unlike the other members, or most of the others, he did not collect his mil-age those years when he held a pass.
He regarded the whole idea as wrong.
He felt that a state official or legislator who traveled on a pass and collected mileage money from the public treasury was not doing the square thing.

With this idea in mind he introduced a bill doing away with the passes. It didn't go through that year, but it bore fruit and resulted in the enactment of the present law which makes it impossible for a state official to use a pass and collect mileage from Maine.

Opposed Railroad Rebates Next Mr. Sewall went after the railroad rebate idea. He was opposed to the legislation by which the state of Maine was rebating 95 percent of the tax which the Bangor and Aroostook, Washington County and Somerset railroads paid. It did not appeal to him as proper. He attacked the plan with the result that an order was presented by him and passed in the house setting forth that it be the policy of the state not to grant further rebates to railroads. That policy has since been adhered to by the legislature, despite the strenuous attempt in 1909 to break it down.

Conservation was another of the big things for which Mr. Sewall stood and as a member of the state senate in 1907 he presented the order which requested the supreme court to give its opinion on the right of the state to regulate the cutting of timbersland.
At the beginning he was laughed at,
but he persisted and finally succeeded in putting the order through. More than that, he won a great victory, for the supreme court of Maine in that great opinion, written by Chief Justice Emery, declared that Maine had a right to regulate the cut of timber on the wild lands.

This was in line with the attitude which Mr. Sewall took during the session of 1907, when, as a member of the senate, he championed the cause of the people in the great fight to save the lakes of Maine. That fight is fresh in the memories of Maine. It was the first great step towards the conservation of the natural resources toward the saving to the people of the valuable assets which the Creator had given them.

This fight to prevent control of the Rangeley lakes passing into the hands of private corporations was the biggest thing of that session. It overshadowed all else in the state house.
It was bitterly contested in the committees and through the house and then in the senate, Mr. Sewall led the fight in the upper branch. It was an uphill fight. It was the day when Sewall, for the second time in his legislative career, changed a minority into a majority of the senate in support of this contention.

That morning, when the bill came up for action, friends of the measure felt confident it would go through the senate. Their canvass convinced them that it would pass by a margin of one vote. They were not bragging, but were confident.

Mr. Sewall took the floor in opposition to granting the permission given in the bill. His speech was a masterpiece of logic. It was eloquent and forceful. He swung the senate and the vote went against the bill. It was a signal victory for the progressive-Bath man.

His other wrestling of victory from defeat by a masterful speech upon the floor of a legislative hall was in the house in 1905, when the committee on finance reported "ought not to pass" on a resolve making an appropriation for the girls' orphanage of Lewiston. Such a report had always been considered as the end of a resolution of this kind. It was so considered by those who had introduced and supported this resolution. But Sewall of Bath was interested. He believed the orphanage to be a good thing. When the report came in he took the floor and in an address which swept the house off its feet moved the substitution of the resolve for the report and the house adopted the motion with a rush. The resolution then passed both branches of the legislature and the institution received the much needed state aid.

Killed State Printing Methods Once more it becomes necessary to go back and start anew in this story of Sewall of Bath. This time it is in the legislature of 1905. That winter, as told, Sewall got after the passes and the rebates, but that was not all.
One of the very first things he did that session was to introduce an order for the investigation of the state printer. In this he took the position that Maine was paying an excessive price for its printing and that the only right way to have this work done was by means of competitive bids open to all printers in the state.

If there is any person in the state of Maine who thinks his order did not create a magnificent hubbub it is because he or she wasn't at the state capital that winter and didn't keep close tabs on what was taking place in Augusta.
That was the greatest old scrap, ever.

The committee of which Hon.
George W. Heselton of Gardiner was chairman, the part of the senate and Mr. Sewall for the house, was made up of some of the ablest men in the Maine legislature of that winter.
Expert printers from all over Maine and New England were before the committee. It was the hardest worked committee, with the possible exception of the special one on salaries and fees, of the session. The result of its findings was the abolition of the office of state printer and the substitution thereof of the present method of letting the printing to the lowest bidder.

The result of the new order of things was a saving, the first year, of over $10,000 to the state.

But this does not end Mr. Sewall's activities in the legislature. One of the last reforms which he initiated came in the latter part of the session of 1907, when, as a senator, he presented the order which resulted in the appointment of a special legislative committee to investigate the liquor agency system of Maine and make report to the legislature of 1909. He was made chairman of the committee and the work was done in a very thorough manner. As a result of it the wrongs of the system were so plainly shown that it was abolished.

In 1908 Mr. Sewall was a candidate for the congressional nomination against Hon. John P. Swasey of Canton, but did not win out in the district convention. He proved himself a good loser, for he got into the campaign in behalf of Mr. Swasey.
He worked hard, never letting up, and was one of the factors in carrying the district for the Oxford county man.

Since then, while being active in the interests of his party, Mr. Sewall has not been a candidate for office until this year, when he was nominated for congress by the Republicans.

Another Side of Him

There is still another side of Mr.
Sewall. That is the purely personal, or should I say, social side. He is one of the most delightful men to know. His heart is big and sympathetic. His every thought is to do good. His honesty is unquestioned, his friendship unswerving. Those who have the pleasure of his personal acquaintance are proud of it. Those who are not intimate with him, unfortunately for them, are in no position fully to appreciate the splendid qualities of the man.

BOLSTER'S MILLS.

Carne-Clark Wedding.
The event of the season was the pretty wedding of Florence Evelyn Clark, elder daughter of A. R. Clark of this place and Rev. W. S. Carne of Bangor, on the afternoon of September 1st.

Miss Clark is a native of Albany and has resided in Bolster's Mills since early childhood. She graduated from North Bridgton Academy last June. Mr.
Carne is a native of Newquay, Cornwall, England. He began preaching at 18 years of age. He did considerable Christian work in South Africa, then went to Iowa, and after a visit to his native shores he went to Bangor where he entered the Theological Seminary, from which institution he graduated in June. Mr. Carne has since been preaching in Brooks. His people there regret much to lose his services. Mr. Carne has supplied the Methodist pulpit at Bol-ster's Mills about two years in the past and has made hosts of friends by his conscientious Christian life.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. David N. Beach, D. D., president of Bangor Theological Seminary. Dr.
Beach officiated at Mr. Carne's graduation, his ordination, as well as at his marriage.

The bridal party stood under an arch of evergreen and golden rod. Helen Clark, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and the brother, Richard Clark, acted as best man. The double ring service was used. Little Philip Wilbur, nephew of the bride, acted as ring bearer. The bride was gown in white trimmed with white silk lace and pearl hands and carried white bridal roses.

Mrs. Chas. Walker softly played the piano during the entire ceremony. Only the immediate relatives were in attendance.

A reception was held immediately following the wedding ceremony which was largely attended. In the receiving line were A. R. Clark and wife, parents of the bride, and the bride and groom.

Punch and fancy crackers were served in the tastefully decorated dining-room.
The bridal party left by auto for a honeymoon in the White Mountains.
On their return they will pass a short time at the bride's parental home and Picnic at Lane Pond.

On Wednesday, August 26, Mt. Cutler Grange, No. 152 enjoyed a very pleasant picnic at Lane pond near Hiram and Brownfield boundary line. The day was fine and eighty persons from Hiram, Brownfield and Baldwin attended. The dinner was ample and excellent. The young folks engaged in various sports and the older ones in social and festive exchange of ideas. The Grange was organized in April, 1875. It has now some sixty members from the ranks of our most successful farmers and estimable women. The picnic ground referred to is an ideal spot between the pond and the County road. It is a part of large tract of perhaps fifty acres that was uncovered about 1842, when the pond was partly drained and lowered about 33 feet. The pond has been known for 90 years as Rattlesnake pond.

Against this we file a protest. We have not heard of a rattlesnake in Brownfield or Hiram for 50 years; but the Lane family have resided in this community since June, 1777, five or six generations, and their honorable service in the French and Indian war of 1758, the Revolutionary war, the war for the Union entitles them to more respect than we feel for the rattlesnakes.

We suggest that Alvina Lane, who owns the picnic ground, and with her brother, Simon P. Lane, owns half the shore of the pond, be requested to name the pond Lane Pond, or something else besides Rattlesnake, and that the Grange and churches that use the picnic grounds annually place the name upon a guide board at the entrance to the grounds.

A HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

that has Lead for 60 years must be very, very good. Otherwise, it couldn't stand this test of time.

Since 1850 "L. F." Atwood's Medicine has been a leading household remedy. For 63 years it has proven its worth as a remedy for all stomach, liver and bowel troubles—and as a tonic of exceptional effect.

Mrs. Cutler's letter simply adds to the overwhelming evidence:

Farmington, Me.

"I have had quite a long experience with 'L. F.' Atwood's Medicine. I have used it for years as a family medicine, a laxative, and for the stomach. I use nothing else for the children. I know of no medicine that could take the place of 'L. F.' Atwood's Medicine as a household remedy."

FRYEBURG.

Jewels Found.

The principal article of jewelry was a large diamond necklace valued at several thousand dollars.

Early Monday morning searching parties were sent over the road toward Bretton Woods but returned at night after a day's search without the jewels. Tuesday morning word was telephoned to Poland that the jewels had been found and it was expected that they would be returned to their owner.

Word was received here Monday that an automobile party which passed through the village enroute to Poland Spring lost a hand bag containing several thousands of dollars worth of jewels. The party stopped here to replenish the supply of gasoline, and in some way the bag was laid on the running board and forgotten, so it is said.

The jewels were valued at $15,000. S. D. Clark of North Bridgton was the finder, and according to the reward, will receive $250.

Presents Flag to Boy Scouts.

Mrs. Wallace R. Tarbox of Fryeburg, one of the National officers of the Ladies of the G. A. R., was honored at the National encampment held in Detroit last week, by being selected by that body to present a beautiful flag to the Boy Scouts of Detroit, who did such magnificent work all through the week.

Hundreds of them were in constant attendance at stations and in every hotel and were indefatigable in their attentions to every one who wore a badge and would not accept from anyone a penny.

Mrs. Tarbox paid a most glowing heart stirring tribute to the boys and was most heartily applauded by the large audience who listened to her grand address. The Maine delegates certainly have reason to be proud of a member who can so ably speak for them at so short a notice. Mrs. Tarbox was presented with a magnificent bouquet of roses by the Captain of the Scouts.
